

“Gratitude for the seemingly insignificant—a seed—this plants the giant miracle.”

- Ann Voskamp

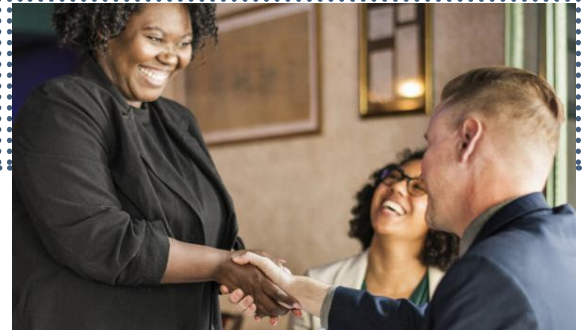

In recent years, we have seen a record increase in students and early career scholars attending the OAH Annual Meeting—Conference on American History.

Our conference is an invaluable opportunity for emerging scholars to network with each other and meet established professional historians who they might not otherwise meet.

However, students, recent graduates, and adjuncts are often on a tight budget, which makes the cost of attending the conference a financial challenge. Once travel, lodging, and registration has been paid, some find there is little left for meals and networking events, which leads to missed opportunities.

For this reason, we created the Treat-A-Scholar Program.

Organization of American Historians Treat-A-Scholar Program

Your gift of $65 or more directly provides funding for a networking luncheon or event for scholars who otherwise could not attend. As you consider your budget this year, please think about supporting these meaningful networking opportunities that open doors to professional relationships for our historians of tomorrow. You will be listed in online media and in publications, provided we receive your gift before publication.
